

From: Neil McKelvie
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 11/23/01 10:35am

I think that any settlement should NOT include any provision for Microsoft to provide computers for schools. He may not be a recognized legal authority, but the song by Tom Lehrer, "The Old Dope Peddler", can be cited: "He gives the kids free samples Because he knows full well That today's young innocent faces Are tomorrow's clientele."

Quite apart from legal remedies as such, there could be a blanket policy from the top levels of the US government, that all branches institute a policy of diversification in computers and computer operating systems. At present, that means getting Macs, in addition to computers using the Microsoft operating system, but such a directive could well lead to other possibilities being introduced. Likewise, State governments could follow suit.

(Prof) Neil McKelvie
City University of New York